WINTER COURSE

Equity and Inclusion: Equity, Race, Culture and Environment

Students will assess the historical context that creates the need for equity and inclusion efforts within the environmental field. This course will examine the impact and implications of power & privilege on one's connection to the environment & will pay special attention to the roles that culture and identity play in creating inclusive, city-centric environmental experiences.

Antioch University Seattle has created a groundbreaking Master of Arts in Education in Urban Environmental Education program that prepares students for leadership roles in environmental education with a focus on urban systems and social justice.

Youth Outside is partnering with Antioch University to deliver a suite of 5 courses in City Centric Urban Education. The 5 courses will take place in Oakland, CA. Graduate credits earned in the Oakland-based program can be directly transferred into any Antioch University program.

The City-Centric Environmental Education Program gives community leaders the opportunity to incorporate the experience of those living in urban communities into environmental curriculum & programming and prepares them to incorporate the social, educational, economic and cultural experiences of those who have been historically marginalized by the green movement into their organizational practices.

Jumpstart your Graduate degree! Oakland-based course credits can be transferred into Antioch University programs across the country or into aligned University programs in other institutions.

Complete your B.A. degree! Students can also use the course credits to finish their B.A. through the Antioch B.A. completion program.

ABOUT YOUTH OUTSIDE

At Youth Outside, we believe that meaningful outdoor experiences can have a major impact on young people's lives. We work to ensure that youth who are underrepresented in the outdoors have opportunities to connect with the outdoors in culturally relevant and inclusive ways through our grantmaking, training & capacity building and advocacy work.
